Chairman Fred C. Black Tells Of Plans For Promotional Campaign

Maine mussel packers have taken steps to put their product on a postwar footing through a program of educational advertising. F. C. Black, chairman of the group announced today. The advertising program will be instituted in the cities of the Pacific Northwest where a market has already been established as soon as final details can be worked out, Black said.

Standards of quality for the industry were discussed at the meeting which would insure fancy pack under the State of Maine trademark. Standards for the pack were laid before the meeting by C. M. White of the State Division of Markets and A. M. G. Soule of the Division of Inspection. The suggested standards were based on research done by the University of Maine and the Department of Agriculture.

Chairman Black stated that the promotional program would be financed by the packers through a per case assessment on the seasonal pack.

Acting in advisory capacity at the meeting were Sturges Dorrance, advertising council for the Maine Development Commission; Commissioner Arthur R. Greenleaf of the Sea and Shore Fisheries Department; Don Block, Division of Markets U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service; Walter Rust, Leslie Seattergood, and Clyde Taylor of the Fish and Wildlife Service; Allen Mills and B. Ingersoll of the Division of Inspection.

The packers were represented by James Wyman, Millbridge, Ed. Witham, Rockland, John Tarbox, S. Gouldsboro, Fred C. Black, Thomaston, Robert Kinney, Bar Harbor, E. R. Elwell, Portland, Roy Allen, Brookline, Ralph Barter, Stonington, Calvin Stinson, Prospect Harbor.

WAC Recruiting Week

Beginning Thursday, the 16,000 theatres of the United States will inaugurate coincident with the second anniversary of this important branch of armed services, "Women's Army Corps Recruiting Week." This event is sponsored by the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, under the chairmanship of Edward L. Alperson.

The American Waacs have distinguished themselves as nice-looking, hard-working, cheerful girls. Most of them have served at Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters and Eighth Airforce stations, where they plotted, teleprinted, operated switchboards, made maps, assessed combat films, "sweated out" missions in flight control rooms. To bring it to a victorious conclusion, the able-bodied women of America are needed as well as its men. From all Army commands come urgent calls for more Waacs—thousands more are needed. Every day our American soldiers are risking their lives and Waacs can help

Candidate Fernald Says "Freedom From Want Is A Global Ideal"

Roy L. Fernald of Winterport, speaking before Rockland Rotarians and guests Friday, said:

"Freedom from want is a global ideal, entirely in conformity with the principle of economic democracy; but the abolition of want depends on economic progress abroad as well as at home. Global economic progress depends on global progress of rationalism and humanism."

Until these become general, only to limited extent can the principles of economic democracy be globally realized. Meanwhile, one of the best services we can give the world is to set other countries a good example by maintaining our own standard of living here in America and in Maine."

Fernald, introduced by Jerome C. Burrows program chairman and a former colleague of Mr. Fernald, said: "great social gains have been made under Gov. Sewall and it is necessary that a proper leader be chosen who could cooperate with far reaching post-war programs to be presented at the next Legislature."

He stated that all Maine resources be developed for Maine people and called for more Maine capital to be invested in Maine projects, rather than continue the investing of money in outside interests. "Maine should not be looked upon as just a vacationland, but rather a year around section to live and work in," Fernald declared.

There were no visiting Rotarians. Guests of members were: I. Leslie Cross, H. Laton Jackson, Robert E. Pendleton and Alderman John W. Lane of Rockland; Rev. L. B. Whitman of Dark Harbor and Frank Rand of Yarmouth. Kelley B. Crie and Stafford M. Congdon conducted the song service. Fifty-eight were present.

Just as homegrown carrots and beets add to the country's food resources, so are used cooking fats a product so vitally needed in our industrial and civilian economy that OPA allows cash and extra ration points for every pound turned over to the meat dealer.

Plant a fat salvage container on the shady back of your stove. Nourish it with meat drippings, roasting and frying scraps, raw fat trimmed from meat and melted down. Weed out all bones and chunks of meat.

Soon your used fat container is full and your harvest is ready for the market.

South Warren Boy Recently Engaged, Loses Life In Florida

Fred R. Bucklin, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Bucklin of South Warren, co-pilot for the Pennsylvania Airlines, lost his life Friday forenoon as an Army Transport Command plane, bringing eight men from Washington, D. C., was struck by a training plane, as it was about to land at the West Palm Beach, Fla., air station. Both planes fell into the water just off shore and at the latest report none of the bodies had been recovered although the transport plane, badly damaged had been recovered.

Word of the accident was received by telephone from the Army Transport Command office in Washington to John A. Chisholm of Rockland, who informed Mr. Bucklin's parents shortly after the message was telephoned late in the afternoon.

Mr. Bucklin was a graduate of Thomaston High School, where he was catcher on the baseball team, and from the University of Maine. He was employed for a time at the fish and game farm at Dry Mills following graduation from the University.

He had two years of civilian pilot training, commencing in the Spring of 1941. He received his primary training in Portland, his secondary in Waterville and his cross-country instruction and motor transport at the Northeast Airlines School in Burlington, Vt. He received his commercial license and instrument rating in March 1943, when he was sworn in for work with the ATC being at that time a co-pilot for the Northeast Airlines School in Mr. Bucklin had been with the Pennsylvania Airlines, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., since February of this year, having been transferred from the North Atlantic wing of the Air Transport Service at Presque Isle, where he had been engaged in work for the ATC since March 1943.

Besides his parents he leaves a brother, Richard Bucklin, a pilot for the United Airlines in Chicago. He recently became engaged to Miss Dorothy M. Sherman of Rockland.

Notify Servicemen's Club If You Have One—Other Matters

At the last meeting of the executive Board of the Servicemen's Club, Miss Betty Beach was chosen to represent the Club at the Recreational Program being held at Augusta today.

There is a very urgent need for more rooms to rent. Many of the boys now stationed here are being sent out into active service. Those from a distance do not usually have time to go home for a last farewell to their loved ones so they send for them to come here. It sometimes happens that they arrive and no place has been found for them to stay. Put yourself or your own sons and daughters in the place of these young people and if you have an extra room in your home won't you please notify the committee for room rentals.

Mrs. Herbert Kirk? You will make some young fellow happy and you will have done a patriotic as well as a Christian deed.

More coat hangers and cribbage boards are needed at the room. Any one having either to donate may bring them to the room at any time. New records for the victrola are always welcome gifts and are needed at all times as well as sheet music. And remember the cookie jar, it always seems to be empty. Home made cookies are so much appreciated by the boys.

The Service Wives Club meets at the club room every Friday from 1.30 to 4.30 p. m. These get-togethers of the young women are proving interesting and helpful in many ways.

A matter pending is that of resuming the private skating parties at the Oakland Park rink if there are enough boys here to set apart a special night for it. They will be conducted in the same manner as last year, with two senior hostesses always present.

Henry B. Bird writes:

"I have been interested in reading 'My Rockland' and the mention of the lime kilns and the Breakwater reminded me of a story my father once told me. When Congressman Dingley had before the house a bill asking for an appropriation for the Breakwater, one member opposed it and said: 'Rockland, Me. where is Rockland?' Mr. Dingley replied: 'I am surprised the gentleman from—State doesn't know what the second part of entry in the United States is. On account of the Johnny Wood Boats, it was said Rockland was second in the number of entries at that time.'"

Active Retired Justice William H. Fisher saw the looms in operation at the Georges River Mills in Warren Tuesday night while on an outing with County Attorney Stuart C. Burgess and a representative of The Courier-Gazette. At the State Police barracks in Thomaston he witnessed a demonstration of the department's two-way radio system, furnished through the courtesy of Lieut. J. Edward Marks. The two events followed supper at Stahl's Tavern in Waldoboro.

A Rockland man who has been married 31 years makes the rather unusual claim that he "never ran a grocery bill or had groceries delivered at his door." It may be mentioned in passing that John and the Mrs. are liberal buyers and good eaters.

A large group of service men worshipped at a Rockland church Sunday morning and signed the guest book. Judge the pastor's surprise when he learned that they represented 18 States—South Dakota, Michigan, Nebraska, Rhode Island, California, Minnesota, West Virginia, Ohio, New York, South Carolina, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Maine, Missouri, New Hampshire, Kansas, Iowa and Indiana.

The woman who wanted to know, in this column, how brass works or water pipes should be cleaned, excited the friendly interest of another feminine reader who advises her to "try 'Noxon.'"

Book Review
(By E. E. F.)

A Haunted House and Other Stories. Author, Virginia Woolf. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York. Someone said of this author, "She gave acute pleasure in new ways and pushed the light of the English language a little further against darkness." All Virginia Woolf's life she delighted to write short stories. Some of these are included in this selected group.

Before she would finish a novel, when she grew a bit weary of her concentration she would rest by going deep into some short story or essay that crowded into her mind. Her eerie conceptions delight the progressive mind. One finds the unusual in this author's concepts. Her deductions give grace and absorbed wonder to the reader—like fads and hats and sea-gulls.

Her poetic thinking is full of harmonies. This handy bedside volume covers the period in Virginia Woolf's writing from 1921 to 1941. No doubt had this author lived, she would have given the world much more of important literature. In this little volume her fame will live.

Associate Editor, MRS. WILLIAM O. FULLER

The Rockland Gazette was established in 1846. In 1874 the Courier was established and consolidated with the Gazette in 1882. The Free Press was established in 1855 and in 1891 changed its name to the Tribune. These papers consolidated March 17, 1897.

[EDITORIAL]

The monthly report of the Sea and Shore Fisheries Department, summarizing the March catch shows that the sea yielded up 12,530,892 pounds of fish and shellfish during that period and that the value was $441,353. The report shows some highly interesting facts. Who, for instance would ever have expected clams to take the lead in point of value. Yet they did for the take was valued at $103,050, while lobsters, which have long held top place in the fish league, dropped to $83,061. Clam diggers received $2.50 a bushel for the 41,236 bushels, dug during the month, a large percentage of which went to the fresh market. Although lobsters dropped 156,719 pounds for the month, the quarterly take of better than 600,000 pounds was double that of the same period in 1943. Wholesalers indicated that if the production continued at its present pace through the year the ten year high mark of 1943 might be exceeded. Forging their way into significant positions in the monthly report are mussels and shrimps. Mussel rakings harvested nearly 40,000 bushels of these shellfish, to bring the total for the first quarter of the year to 81,000 bushels—an increase of 200 percent over the same period last year. During the months of February and March 370,000 pounds of shrimp were caught, which is an increase of 100,000 pounds over the years total in 1943.

THEY'RE WATCHING FERNALD

Sam E. Conner, the versatile staff writer of the Lewiston Journal, who should know as much about Maine politics as anybody else in the State, traveling hither and yon, as he has over a long period of years, sees Roy L. Fernald as a potential threat in the Republican gubernatorial race—"for the first time in three starts." For some months past," says Conner, "Fernald has been placed second in the contest by most observers, with Hildreth in the lead, and Richardson running third, but not until the past few days has it seemed the Hildreth lead has been sufficiently cut to make the Winterpoint candidate an actual threat." If persistence and perseverance count for anything Fernald ought to be well in the running. He has canvassed every nook and corner of the State for months and has never really been idle since his second defeat in the contest for the governorship nomination.

DAYLIGHT SAVING ATTACKED

Another war is looming on the home front and it will come about when the bill to abolish daylight saving time is presented. The sponsor of the bill is Representative Cannon a Missouri Democrat, who argues that the present method has "deprived millions of a needed hour of sleep on sultry nights, saved no electric power or light; wasted manpower and farm products; added confusion and distress to the already tense war situation, contributed directly to juvenile delinquency and assaults upon women on their way to employment in the premature darkness of the morning." For many years this newspaper has championed the cause of daylight saving, the many advantages of which are now more fully realized than they were at the outset. But it seems more like common sense to revert to standard time during the season when it remains dark so late in the morning.

SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS RAMPANT

A prediction that Florida, Alabama and perhaps other Southern States will turn their electoral votes to the Republican candidates is made by John Barr, National Chairman of the "Byrd-for-President" committee, who says that the delegates elected in Florida are about evenly divided between Byrd and the fourth term candidates. To think that Florida might go Republican sounds rather absurd on the face of it, but it has once, together with other Southern States. The significance of the matter seems to be in the fact that so many thousands of Democrats are opposed to making it a life job for Roosevelt.

"DIME NOVEL RHETORIC"

State Senator Maurice Goldman did Labor no great favor in his May Day speech on Boston Common when he attacked the newspapers as "the poisoned press," "the paid hirelings of Fascism." That the newspaper industry has its faults, its weaknesses, its dangerous strengths, cannot and will not be denied by anyone who has ever worked for a newspaper; call that industry, "Fascist," however, and your newsmen will come out swinging. He may laugh at the Senator's dime-novel rhetoric, but he respects himself and his job and he won't be libeled. "Fascism," my eye! It is true that the publisher of a paper or papers sets the political policies to be followed. It is also true that some papers do immeasurable harm because of the "slant" demanded by the publisher. One chain of papers has been accused by historians (not without justice) of precipitating the Spanish-American war. But such papers create their own opposition. Senator Goldman undoubtedly can point to a number of newspapers whose publishers have little sympathy for the cause of the Left; he would mention, probably one in Chicago and another in New York. Yet, in these very cities, within the last several years, the Left has gained powerful allies in Marshall Field's "Chicago Sun" and "P. M." It seems at the least, disconcerting on the part of the Senator to have forgotten their existence. And there are others—a good many others.

The policy of a paper, let it be remembered, is not all. A newspaper exists because it presents the news. If it cheats in that presentation, if it colors, omits, distorts, neglects, it dies eventually—a better paper kills it off. Below the publisher are the men who do the work, the editors, the reporters, the legmen, copy-readers, re-write men—all with the same idea: get the story, and get it right. These "hirelings of Fascism" are the newspaper—not the paper's policy. They deal in facts, not fiction; actualities, not ideologies. The competition is stiff, it's a tough racket; if they're "beaten" too often they get fired.—Watertown, (Mass.) Sun.

Pfc. Andrew E. Coffey of Ash Point

Hardingen Army Air Field, Texas—Another large class of Aerial Gunners to guard Army Air Force bombers was graduated this week from the AAF Training Command aerial gunnery school here and among the qualified "Sharpshooters of the Sky" was Andrew E. Coffey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew A. Coffey of Ash Point.

He received a pair of gunner's wings as well as a promotion in grade. Unless retained at Hardingen as an instructor, he will join an aerial combat team.

A comprehensive seven-weeks course in every phase of aerial gunnery warfare prepared him for his place in America's stepped-up air offensive. Besides learning to fire every type weapon from camera guns to the deadly caliber .50 Brownings, he studied turret manipulation, aircraft recognition and was required to tear down and assemble weapons while blindfolded. He climaxed the course by firing on towed targets from Liberator bombers under simulated combat conditions.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of my mother, Martha J.
Long, May 10, 1932.
Mother.

Where has that lovely presence gone?
I lift my eyes in vain, I see
Naught, save at sunset, pearly dawn,
But drifting clouds 'twixt me and thee.
Perhaps you watch beyond that star
We loved to watch when you were here,
Beyond that sun, that seems so far;
You wait my spirit to draw near.
Would I could pierce the veil between,
And see what you are doing there.
Yet faith must trust, and love must dream
Until I reach those realms of air.

Mary E. L. Taylor
Rockland.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Alton W. Richards who passed away May 10, 1941.
It is loneliness here without you.
Sad and weary is the way.
Life is not the same to me
Since you were called away.
His wife Jennie L. Richards

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Laura E. Stanley, who passed away May 9, 1938.
A precious one from us is gone.
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
May winds of heaven blow gently
Over that sweet and sacred spot
Though sleeping in her silent grave
She will never be forgot.
Sadly missed by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel
Cole, skilman, N. J.; Mrs. Sadie Gross,
Stonington; Forest Stanley, Swan's

Cleanly Habits

And How They Can Make Our City A Source Of Pride

Many citizens responded with pride and valiant effort in cleaning sand from sidewalks and scraps and trash from our streets.
And how much better we look with and feel as we walk over clean thoroughfares. Now if we can teach our citizens in embryo to desist from throwing paper all about, and to have well cleaned raked and tidy gardens and streets, we will all be happy.

Thoughtless school children throw paper about all too recklessly and teachers might help this condition by words of caution, pointing to pride in their home town.

A fine hedge was placed at the High School grounds, for beauty, by graduates and it's not a thing of beauty now, but full up with paper and trash. Our school grounds should be looked after and kept neat. Grove street is one street in our city which suffers from the idle habits of children throwing paper to the winds, and it is not good citizenship to let his happen without a protest.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT

CHAPTER VI

At the desk of the Chief Medical Examiner, he was informed, casually, that he had been accepted for General Military Service.

It was a little difficult to realize it. He was dazed. He felt that his dyspepsia had been insulted. He still suffered from chronic indigestion no matter how lightly it was regarded.

All except three of the Springfield contingent were accepted. Freddie and Jack were among the successful ones—or unsuccessful—whichever way you looked at it, a matter depending on how far your patriotism went.

After retrieving their clothes and hiding their nakedness, they were marched outside. Lined up in the open, they took the oath of enlistment. Mr. Winkle felt very solemn about swearing to bear true faith and allegiance to this country.

In the clothing depot they were turned over to a little Sergeant no larger than Mr. Winkle. He had a wizened face and a great many service stripes on his sleeve. In a dry good-humored voice he instructed them to change into something more appropriate to their surroundings and new standing.

Sergeant Czeideskrowski took them, with more new soldiers from other contingents, to a receiving barracks in the Reception Center. Here they would stay for several days, and here Mr. Winkle saw what his future bedroom was like.

Mr. Winkle saw what his future bedroom was like.

He was appalled.

Not that the quarters weren't good. Indeed, they were better than those any other Army in the world could boast.

Even in his somewhat depressed state Mr. Winkle ate more than he usually did at home, which he knew would not please Army. He didn't mention anything about this when the Alphabet, in motherlike fashion, saw to it that they filled out postcards to their families announcing the good news of their being in the Army.

Finally, for that day, came instruction in bed making. After an hour of experimenting, during which most of them believed he could make his bed perfectly in the dark, Sergeant Czeideskrowski observed that none of them would pass inspection, but their efforts would do for them to sleep that night.

Lying in the darkness, with some of the men talking back and forth in whispers, Mr. Winkle felt unnatural. He was no longer Wilbert Winkle, captain of his own soul or body. He belonged to an immense, fearsome, mysterious organization called the Army whose purpose was to fight other men to the death.

There were so many members of this that track of them could be kept only by numbers. He was numbered 45,575,912. This humiliating figure was marked on two identical metal tags hung around his neck on a white cord. One was two inches below the other. He understood these were called "dog tags." He also understood that in case of the dog's death the lower tag was cut off to keep the records, while the other remained on the body. Suddenly he became aware that someone was taking it much harder than he.

Freddie, snorting and grumbling, decided to agree. Soberly they thumbed through their copies of The Soldier's Handbook, reading the instructions about what was, for most of them of their age, their first job.

Mr. Winkle looked about for companionship of his own. A few men looked as if they might be old enough for him, but he couldn't be sure. One of them passed by his cot, and Mr. Winkle, catching his glance, and for lack of anything else to say on the spur of the moment observed: "Well, here we are."

"Hah!" the man asked, staring blankly.

Mr. Winkle didn't pursue it, and the man passed on.

He realized just what an outsider he was going to be. He wrote a letter to Army. He informed her that his bag would arrive home by express collect; it contained his rubbers, which she had better give to the scrap rubber drive. He instructed her to tell the Pettigrews that Jack was getting along fine—right now he was having a rough time with another boy. He assured Amy that he was all right. He just felt a little funny in his new life.

Sitting there alone on his cot, Mr. Winkle reflected that he felt more than a little funny.

There was an additional thing connected with what was going on, which he couldn't exactly analyze or express. It was connected in some way with the broad, general structure of the state of human affairs. It went beyond the possibility that man was a warring animal in spite of all his civilized refinements. Neither was it to be found in the concurrent theory that at certain intervals man needed to make war in order to pull himself down to his natural level, which he had made the mistake of exceeding.

Perhaps, thought Mr. Winkle, what he felt was contained in the fact that man had a will to die as well as a will to live, and that the present war was merely a grand expression of this. The world was bent on a mass suicide-pact, whose impulses would be spent only when millions had done away with themselves by the oblique methods employed.

he. From the next cot, from Jack, there came faint, suppressed sniffling.

Mr. Winkle understood at once. The boy was homesick. Quickly, he leaned out of his bed. They had promised to look after each other, and the boy had already looked after him in trying to fight Freddie.

"If the others hear," Mr. Winkle advised in a whisper, "especially Freddie, it will be worse than the way you feel now. You'll be all right tomorrow. You'll get to like it."

Jack didn't answer. But the sniffling stopped. From far away a bugle sounded in the night, which began to grow quiet. War, which had come close, withdrew, receding in the strange darkness.

Mr. Winkle fell in line with the other men on the company street. It was barely light. It was cold. All about were the dim outlines of buildings. A vast, still of men and their movements and voices spread in all directions, ghostly and weird.

Shivering, Mr. Winkle wondered if this could be only a bad dream. Surely he would soon awaken in his own warm bed with Amy beside him, telling him it was time to get up after a good night's rest instead of the fifteen minutes' nap he felt he had.

Instead, he heard Sergeant Czeideskrowski calling his name in the roll.

"Here," Mr. Winkle quavered. "Tindall!"

"I guess I'm here," Freddie answered. "I'm not sure."

"Answer here only," the Alphabet ordered. "We'll try again, Tindall!"

"Here," Freddie replied. In a low mutter he added, "What's left of me."

The Alphabet strode over to stand in front of Freddie. He took out a little black notebook from his pocket, wrote in it, and said:

"Private Tindall, because it's you, and you ain't had the Articles of War read to you yet, especially Article Sixty-five providing punishment for insubordination to a noncommissioned officer—which is me—we'll just set a record for the camp. You're getting K P duty on your second day. You will become famous for this."

Mr. Winkle was almost glad to see how wrong Freddie was in his attitude, and how painful this was going to make it for him. Then he felt guilty at having such an unworthy sentiment.

"Pettigrew!"

Teeth chattered. Between clicks, Jack called that he was present.

Mr. Winkle had a sense of floating through the rest of that day. He remained in a daze from the shock of entering the Army. He supposed it was the same with the other men, but he didn't notice them very much.

At the dispensary Mr. Winkle was inoculated for so many things that he couldn't keep track of them all. The faintness induced by being pricked on one arm was counteracted by being pricked on the other arm immediately afterward. He enjoyed only one of the examinations. That was the Mechanical Aptitude Test. He was happy to wade right through this, answering nearly every question with ease and certainty, while others scratched their heads.

In the afternoon, when they were given individual interviews, he hoped to learn what might be done with him. The interviewer drew him out about the work he had done in civil life. He showed a mild interest in Mr. Winkle's history as an accountant, but mostly he asked Mr. Winkle to talk about himself as a repairer of anything and the fact that he had his own shop.

"I think we'll have a place for you," he said, quite as if Mr. Winkle only now had been accepted for the position, and hired.

"Can you tell me how I'll be used?" Mr. Winkle asked with anxiety. "I don't think I'd make such a good foot soldier."

"You want to fight, don't you?" "If I can."

He had to content himself with these unsatisfactory remarks.

The late afternoon was given to them to do as they pleased—within the confines of their barracks. That is, all except Freddie. An emissary of Sergeant Czeideskrowski, in the form of a Corporal, arrived to instruct Freddie to get into his fatigues and follow him. "We're going bubble dancing," the Corporal said.

Freddie, snorting and grumbling, decided to agree. Soberly they thumbed through their copies of The Soldier's Handbook, reading the instructions about what was, for most of them of their age, their first job.

Mr. Winkle looked about for companionship of his own. A few men looked as if they might be old enough for him, but he couldn't be sure. One of them passed by his cot, and Mr. Winkle, catching his glance, and for lack of anything else to say on the spur of the moment observed: "Well, here we are."

Mr. Winkle didn't pursue it, and the man passed on.

He realized just what an outsider he was going to be. He wrote a letter to Army. He informed her that his bag would arrive home by express collect; it contained his rubbers, which she had better give to the scrap rubber drive. He instructed her to tell the Pettigrews that Jack was getting along fine—right now he was having a rough time with another boy. He assured Amy that he was all right. He just felt a little funny in his new life.

Sitting there alone on his cot, Mr. Winkle reflected that he felt more than a little funny.

There was an additional thing connected with what was going on, which he couldn't exactly analyze or express. It was connected in some way with the broad, general structure of the state of human affairs. It went beyond the possibility that man was a warring animal in spite of all his civilized refinements. Neither was it to be found in the concurrent theory that at certain intervals man needed to make war in order to pull himself down to his natural level, which he had made the mistake of exceeding.

Perhaps, thought Mr. Winkle, what he felt was contained in the fact that man had a will to die as well as a will to live, and that the present war was merely a grand expression of this. The world was bent on a mass suicide-pact, whose impulses would be spent only when millions had done away with themselves by the oblique methods employed.

Yet not even in that did he discover an explanation of the thing he felt. It was to be found in something more simple than any such objective ideas, which were perhaps a little crazy, anyway, or at least too dangerous to entertain.

But he was sure there was something to express the situation in which he found himself, and that he would ultimately run across it. He decided to be on the lookout for it.

Private Tindall came in shortly after five, looking hot and not carrying a very attractive figure in his soiled dungarees. His thin line of mustache did not seem to fit this garment at all. Several of the men wanted to know what he had had to do.

Freddie glared at them disgustedly. "I washed floors," he snarled. "Me!"

Jack led the laugh that followed. Freddie strode over to him without a word, drew back his fist and hit him.

Jack sat down on a cot, not hurt but angry.

Mr. Winkle had time to think that it was a good thing he had finished his letter mentioning Jack before the boy rose, again to battle Freddie.

From the doorway the voice of Alphabet was heard: "For fighting with a fellow soldier, you are being punished by being put in the stockade for one week. Private Tindall. But this time we'll make it just the garbage detail for tomorrow."

After the Alphabet had written in his notebook and gone away, Freddie promised, "I'm going to kill him. From A to Z."

"I don't get you first," Jack muttered.

"You," Freddie demanded, "and what other part of the Army? You and Pop, maybe?"

Mr. Winkle reflected that this was not the right outlook at all. It was hardly the true spirit of the reason they were here.

Mr. Winkle did not find a friend of his own age until he was shipped on a train to his Replacement Training Center. Camp Squibb was a thousand miles away from home. Mr. Winkle understood that this great distance was for the purpose of getting him away from family ties.

He was no happier at this than was Freddie Tindall when it was learned that Sergeant Czeideskrowski was to accompany and stay with them. It seemed that the Alphabet had been champing at the bit for

They eyed each other. Mr. Winkle smiled briefly, and was given a frown. That wasn't encouraging. Nevertheless, Mr. Winkle spoke, introducing himself. He gave his age, glanced around, and observed, "I guess we're sort of two of a kind here."

"Yeah," the other man said in a deep voice.

Mr. Winkle offered the information that he was a married man. His look inquired if the same situation held true with his acquaintance.

"Nav," the man said.

There the matter rested for a moment, until the man suddenly announced his own name, which was Tinker, and his age, forty-two. He said he was a plumber.

Mr. Winkle asked him how he felt about being in the Army.

Camp Squibb was a great deal like their first camp, except that it was much larger, stretching for miles across the flat bare land. It was the general belief that no one knew how large it was, nor where it began and ended. It had simply been built until there were no boundaries at all. Men, it was said, had become lost in it and not yet found. Another rumor had it that in case of invasion the enemy was to be lured to Camp Squibb where, once caught in this trap, it would never find its way out.

Learn How To Fall

One Of The Suggestions Made By Speaker At Warren Parent-Teacher Meeting

Dr. Louis Hutto, Director of Physical Education, of the State Department of Education, spoke of the importance of health in every day life, and in the development of healthy children, at the meeting of the Warren Parent-Teacher Association.

"The foundation of health in children is important for strength and vitality in later life," he said.

Touching briefly on delinquency, he said, "There will be no such thing as delinquency if the youngsters are kept busy. We must increase the young people's responsibility, and instill the pride of ownership, and importance of co-operation. People on the whole have not understood what produces the life we want to live. We have been inclined to do too much for the children at times. Many parents are too engrossed in making a living to understand what their children need from them as parents."

Then turning to the results found in the selective service, Dr. Hutto pointed out that 25.6 percent of the young men in the country failed to have poor teeth.

"This is due not only to defects in the diet but to the fact the children are not out of doors enough during the winter months, which he 'cooped-up,' he explained.

"Vitamin D can be absorbed in winter as in summer. Physical education should continue during the winter months."

A baked bean supper will be served Thursday at 6.30 at Goodwill Grange. Those not solicited will furnish sweets.

Children of Hinckley Corner Primary school recently remembered Mrs. Joseph Stickney, who is ill, with a delightful May basket (Sunshine basket.)

A grass fire which became out of control late Friday afternoon burned the barn, small store and hen house at the Martha Jones place in Pleasantville. Firemen, volunteers including the crew from the Charles Starrett Saw mill at Pleasantville, prevented the flames from spreading.

The winter months.

"To use the body effectively, children should be taught to relax. Tension brings on pressure and fatigue. The rate of learning goes down as fatigue and tension increase. Prevention of mental unbalance can be in the school program, but starts at home. Teachers and pupils must have fun in the school day to progress, and pupils must feel they are important to the program."

"One of the important things to learn in a physical program is how to fall without injury to one. By learning full control of the body, one is one way to prevent falls, which often are fatal, even in the home. Safety methods of stopping, starting, and the lifting of objects can be taught."

In Superior Court

Ernest A. Adelman against Adelaide Adelman occupied the attention of the Court Friday afternoon and Saturday.

The libellant, former manager of the MacKay Radio Station at South Cushing, now an aviator in the Royal Air Force, Transport Command, who has recently returned from a flight to India and China, testified to his marriage with the libellee July 2, 1935. It appeared from the testimony that he was born in Austria and came to this country with his parents at the age of four years and that his wife had been in the habit of referring to his foreign birth in a manner in which the word "Nazi" appeared.

He testified that he supported a child by her former marriage and claimed that acts of cruel and abusive treatment had so affected his nervous capacity that he was grounded and hospitalized in a South African hospital for several weeks.

Mrs. Adelman denied the various charges and much of her testimony was confined to financial matters between the parties; it appearing that her husband had formerly provided $200 monthly for her support, that it had been reduced to $150 and more recently to $80 per month; that their child Jon, age six years, had lived with her at the home of her daughter in this city.

The testimony of a Portland detective who had spent some 16 days on the case proved an interesting feature of the trial. He described Mrs. Adelman as a frequent visitor of local cocktail rooms and testified that she had been accompanied by male friends in returning to her home as late as 1 o'clock in the morning. This was denied by the libellee, who claimed it was a case of mistaken identity.

A divorce was granted to the libellant Ernest A. Adelman, and the custody of the child was given to the mother until further order of Court.

Charles T. Smalley appeared for the libellant and Harry E. Wilbur represented the libellee.

Other divorces granted:

Lillian H. Coid of St. George from Harding S. Coid of St. George, non-support. Custody of Harding J. and Marguerite, minor children, granted to the libellant until further order of court, father to have the right of visitation at reasonable times. Smalley for libellant.

Custody of Blanche E. and Claude R. minor children granted to Lillian M. Leonard until further order of Court. Both parties to have right of visitation with the children in custody of each other. Burrows for libellant.

Planning to move?

ASK IF YOU CAN GET A TELEPHONE AT YOUR NEW ADDRESS

Because there just isn't enough equipment to go around these days, you may not be able to get telephone service at the new address, if you are planning to move.

Before moving, or taking a house for the summer, please ask at your local Telephone Business Office whether service will be available at the new address.

We would like to give service to all who want it but we just can't fill waiting orders until the facilities become available. Our reserves, ample in normal times, are all in use, and the shortage of materials due to war needs has stopped the manufacture of new equipment for civilian use.

Where have all the telephones gone? Mostly into the greatly expanded activities of the Army and Navy and essential war industries. Actually we have in service 225,000 more instruments and handle daily a half-million more calls than before the war.

That's why it's advisable for you to make inquiries before you move or make plans for the summer.

This And That

Who is it wants to know a new song as sung today with tune and rhythm turning back to that old favorite: School daze, school daze. Merged with motor fuel ways. Finds us a-reading the Honor list Nothing but Junior's name is missed And it goes on for generations of verses.

Apple Pan Dowdy
(Serves 6-8)
Eight tart cooking apples, 1/4 cup water, 1 cup molasses, 2-3 cup sugar 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, pastry.

Peel, quarter and core apples. Place in covered casserole dish; add water, molasses, sugar and salt. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F) for 30 minutes; remove cover and bake for 15 minutes longer. Remove from oven; cool; dot with butter. Roll pastry to 1/4-inch thickness, prick with fork; cover apples. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F) for 10 minutes; reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F) and continue baking 20 minutes longer.

An easy and excellent substitute for tartar sauce can be made quickly thus:
One third cup stiff mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon pickle relish, 1/2 teaspoon finely minced onion or chives, speck salt, speck paprika, 1 finely chopped olive, 1/2 teaspoon lemon or pickle juice.
Mix and chill ingredients.

It was John Calvin who said "God has provided the soul of man with intellect by which he might discern good from evil, just from unjust." The allied nations will be compelled to scatter the Germans about over the face of the earth, no more hibernating and plotting for another war by them. They do not feel the need of a soul.

From Christian Science Monitor: So much emphasis has been placed on the assertion that this war is being fought for the "common man" we are apt to overlook the fact it is being fought by the common man for all men. Honor headlines in American newspapers this week were shared by a sharecropper, a Creek Indian, and the son of a blacksmith, all recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Johnnie Hutchins, the Texas sharecropper, was mortally wounded by a bomb explosion, steered his ship to safety out of the path of a torpedo. Second Lieut. Ernest Childers, the American-Indian mechanic, though suffering a fractured hip moved up the Salerno hillside, and in his own apologetic words: There were three machine gun nests that hill, but I only got to take care of two of them." "Commando Kelly," the blacksmith's son from Pittsburgh's "Dutchtown" section is credited, among other feats, with accounting for 40 enemy soldiers. If these are "common" men may we have more of them! And may our post-war planners remember the debt that we owe them and their counterparts on every battlefield. Charity cannot pay that debt. Justice and opportunity can.

Rubinstein's Annual

Mrs. Nathalie Snow Elected President—Plans For State Convention

The Rubinstein Club's closing meeting of the season with preparation for the State meeting of Music Clubs was an event of unusual pleasure. It was held at the home of Miss Margaret Simmons and Mrs. Grace Strout, Masonic street, Friday night.

With election of officers for the coming year and club business taken care of, minds concentrated on the several committees listed for the annual convention of Music Clubs at Rockland, May 25-27.

After a short rehearsal of chorus work the ladies were invited into the dining room where a table graced by a May pole, rooted in a generously lovely white frosted cake, with exquisite decorations, Ribbons extending from the ceiling; a loaded table of sandwiches, cakes, sweets and nuts, was a fascinating sight, with punch bowl at one end presided over by Mrs. Carol Jillson and other members of the club.

With Miss Mabel Spring in full charge of the event it could not fail in being a thing of beauty and a joy to all assembled.

The list of officers for the coming year are: Mrs. Nathalie Snow, president; Mrs. Nettie Bird Frost, vice president; Miss Mabel Spring, secretary; Mrs. Lillian Joyce, treasurer.

Miss Dorothy Lawry, the retiring president, has carried the work of the club gallantly through a hard year and with brilliant success.

Thompson Bequest

E. E. Light Suggests Former Congregational Church For Site Of Memorial

Editor of Courier-Gazette:

What has come to be known as the Thompson Building Fund to the Town of Union has now become a present problem to the citizens of that town by the recent death of its donor.

This fund arises from the will of a citizen, Mrs. Thompson of Massachusetts, lately deceased, amounting to $30,000, bequeathed in a certain item in that will, and to be used for a building for the Town, as a "Memorial" to her parents, (Augustin and Sara Thompson,) "by obtaining leave of any court to do so."

Now the rumor has gone abroad that the will requires the construction of a new, separate building.

But the first question to be solved is the location of such a Memorial building.

At the last annual Town meeting a committee was voted for handling the Thompson Fund. No discussion, that I am aware of, in regard to location, construction, size and form material or otherwise, occurred at the time.

The committee may recommend, suggest, investigate or provide for temporary care and disposal of the Funds, until further disposal of the fund as required, by vote of the town and in accordance with the provisions of the will, and "leave of any court" to do so.

This condition of the will which does not appear elsewhere in the will (that is quite lengthy) is probably designed to provide for an "appeal" if desired, by any interested parties, to any undue or improper action taken rather than to "break" the will.

Therefore, the location of such an important "Memorial" becomes an important problem in which every citizen should be interested and given an opportunity to express his choice.

I deem it proper to discuss the question of "Location" in the columns of your valuable paper.

The town now owns many pieces of valuable real estate, but most of them are not available or advisable for such a Memorial building, which should be in public view, near its central settlement, and acceptable for public uses.

Now I propose that the former Congregational Church, and lot be acquired by the town for a location of the Memorial building, of whatever design, is adopted. It is central, and on its most important street; readily accessible, of ample area, its location has been satisfied by its use for more than a century as a church lot, without a murmur of remonstrance, and is as convenient of access for any public use, as is the present town house.

It is now unused, and for sale. If not at reasonable figure, it being for a public use can be taken under the "Right of Eminent Domain."

The present building can be used, or reconstructed or sold, and the lot will still exist, and become as desirable, as would be the present town house site, were the building removed.

The church lot might in perhaps a short time be sold by its present owner to become utilized for objectionable purposes, offensive to both adjoining residents and the public.

The present building, now contains valuable memorial windows, which ought to be preserved and their protection and preservation on the same hallowed spot, could easily be accomplished if the citizens of this generation have a "Vision not to preach but to become a happy people" by consecrating portions of it to be a Museum of Church, World War Veterans and Library uses and any other requirements that in coming generations they might desire. Leave the present Townhouse for baser uses as is now allowed, and create a Memorial structure that the ample funds, now donated will afford, which will reflect lasting honor on this generation, that now has the opportunity and generous means donated.

I hope the Committee now constituted, will not deem this article as presumptuous but rather an earnest recommendation and one not imposed, by a citizen of many years residence.

E. E. Light.

WASHINGTON—AND YOU

By Margaret Chase Smith

Washington May 3—I was pleased with Secretary Hull's invitation to represent Congress as a U.S. Government Advisor at the International Labor Conference in Philadelphia. It is a most stimulating experience but it has meant a great deal of detailed committee work and in addition to having my mail forwarded here I have hurried back to Washington week-ends or whenever I could to catch up with my own office work.

Forty-five nations are represented at this Conference by government, employers and workers, delegates and advisors, and although interpreters are necessary a great deal of the time, it is interesting to hear the different points of view, and I believe that discussion of our common problems will help toward a lasting peace.

Though I attend general meetings and discuss all subjects, I have chosen for my own special subcommittee, the organization of employment in the transition from war to peace because I regard that as so very important. It is true that we do not know when the war will end, but we must not wait until we are ready—we need to have plans when needed.

I was pleased to attend the final dinner and meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors recently in Washington as the guest of Duncan Oliphant of the Press Herald. Generals and Admirals were there and gave us a summary of the war situation. Military officials feel that newspaper editors should have all possible information even though it can't all be published.

....

Secretary of War Stimson says that the War Department does not prescribe the kind of fuel which must be used in stoves in camps for war prisoners. When a constituent wrote me that the specifications for prisoner camps required stoves of the hard coal burning type I inquired why this is so in view of the scarcity of hard coal in Maine.

Prisoners of war are not being pampered, Mr. Stimson says, but are being treated humanely and fairly as soldiers of an opposing army. Under present policy prisoners of war camps are located primarily to assure maximum employment of prisoners of war and the War Department is permitting employment of prisoners of war in production of wood and timber products because of the great demand for labor in that industry.

The terms of the Geneva Convention, the Secretary says, specify that accommodations furnished prisoners of war shall be equal to the facilities furnished for troops of the detaining Power in base camps. The United States signed that agreement. Therefore the War Department makes every effort to provide quarters for prisoners of war in keeping with the spirit as well as letter of the Geneva Convention.

As to the type of fuel to be used in prisoner camps, the Secretary says that a universal stove is used in the United States. Bituminous coal is used wherever practicable at all military installations in New England. However at prisoner of war camps an allowance is made to the contractor for fuel furnished and no control over the type of fuel used is exercised by the War Department.

The Boston office of the Civil Service Commission says that the quota of general helpers needed at Pearl Harbor is filled and the call for workers discontinued. Applications have been filed as they come in, however, for consideration for future vacancies. I have been surprised at the popularity of these positions in the island possession. Whenever the government has announced positions open in Alaska, for instance, constituents have written me eagerly about them, and other Congressmen say the same thing. Delegate Joseph Farrington of Hawaii entertained members of the Naval Affairs Committee including myself, recently at a luncheon for Admiral Furlong of the Navy Yard at Hawaii, which I found very informative about conditions there, both civil and naval.

A constituent has written suggesting that tax allowance be made for parents who are helping the families of service men. In many cases, he says, the allowances of the service man is not enough and fathers and mothers have to help. He suggests that the first $3000 of a gift from parent to child should be exempt from the gift taxation and should be exempt from income tax in the parent's bracket and taxed in the recipients tax bracket. This consideration is given a man paying alimony for instance, and a father ought to be given at least as much consideration when helping a child, he says. I have turned this suggestion over to the members of the Ways and Means Committee.

Wanted: 700 WACS

Will Be Sent To Fort Meade, Maryland, For Important Army Work

A new detachment which is being sought by the WAC at the request of the Ground Forces will number 700 women at full strength and has just been activated at the overseas depot in Maryland. The women who qualify for this detachment will be assigned to a wide variety of skilled duties in personnel, military intelligence, operation and training supply, public relations, special services, transportation, troop movements and administration. The Army specifically points out that in recruiting women for this vast and highly specialized detachment that there will be no time to send these women to special schools, but all women enlisting now in the WAC for any one of these jobs will be sent immediately to Fort Meade, Maryland, to take over the job for which they have been selected.

Very careful and complete arrangements have been made to provide for these women from the standpoint of housing, health, and welfare, and leisure time. The new WAC detachment will be housed in 12 regulation barracks situated within the large area of Fort Meade, Maryland. Each has its own laundry room for WACS.

There is a beauty parlor and an Army shopping center known as the Post Exchange.

Women who are recruited personally for this detachment will enjoy two large day rooms furnished complete with radios, writing rooms and game rooms.

There is bus and train service to Baltimore, Washington and New York City within three hours of the post.

The War Department further states that it is not interested in attracting women solely by the illusions of glamour and adventure, but that here in this depot the work of sending men overseas and the daily preparation of thousands of records is going forward with the least possible delay, concurrent with the grim business of war.

Women are warned that the work is long and hard, but that it is of first importance, and that faithfulness to the duty and abilities will be generously rewarded.

The recruiting officers of the Women's Army Corps throughout Maine are serious as well as enthusiastic about filling the War Department's tremendous request for 700 women for this post at Fort Meade. There are WAC personnel in Augusta, in Waterville, and in Rockland who are thoroughly informed with regard to this latest need, and who are anxious to discuss it with any woman who feels that she can find her place in winning the war by joining the Women's Army Corps.
